OCSBDC In The LA Times

One of SBA's key resource partners, the Orange County Small Business Development Center, was featured earlier this week in the Los Angeles Times - OC Edition.

The article points out the fact that the SBDC is having a busy season as current and future business owners receive one-on-one counseling sessions and attend training seminars to better position themselves for success, especially during these slower economic times.

The link to the article can be found here.

A big 'thanks!' goes out to Leila Mozafarri and her entire team for the work they are doing to educate Orange County's entrepreneurs!

State Of The City Season

Many cities will present their annual State of the City address in the upcoming weeks. These addresses provide a way for the mayor to discuss a city's accomplishments and plans and goals for the future.

It also gives those in attendance the opportunity to meet members of the city's business community and learn about key projects and events happening in the city.

SBA staff look forward to attending State of the City events throughout the district and are interested in learning what plans are in place to help the small business community.

TriTech SBDC Hits And Exceeds Its Goals

By Jill Andrews

The TriTech Small Business Development Center, hosted by Riverside Community College, has just reported Economic Impacts of over $33 MM this year, exceeding their 2008 goals by $28 MM.

TriTech SBDC works with high tech, high growth clients in three counties. The counselors offer their clients services such as restructuring, planning, new product launch and access to investors who fund high tech firms and develop exit strategies for profitable companies.

Center Director, Mark Mitchell, attributes the success and growth of TriTech to the quality of the counselors he has been able to recruit.

The counselors have a wide range of experience in law, commercial banking, food service, package delivery services, printing and publications, and digital communications. Not all of the services provided require huge investments or owner capital; TriTech counselors also provide business growth and expansion strategies for organic growth and boot strapping.

TriTech is managed by Mark Mitchell, under a contract with California State University Fullerton. He can be contacted by calling 951.571.6477.

A Look Back At INPRO 2008

The 33rd Annual Indian Progress in Business Event (INPRO) took place September 11 & 12 at the Pechanga Resort & Casino in Temecula. This premier event is presented by the National Center for American Indian Enterprise Development (NCAIED) and typically features an awards gala, national fundraiser and scholarship presentations to deserving American Indian undergraduate or graduate students majoring in business.

An already outstanding event was made even better this past year, thanks to the hard work of several SBA team members. SBA's Paul Smith, Oscar Padilla and Jill Andrews have spent years building relationships with Native American communities throughout the country. After months of discussion, the National Center agreed to move INPRO to the Santa Ana District (event was previously held in L.A.) and onto Tribal Land.

In addition to the move, a new component was added to the event for the first time. An American Indian Business Opportunity Fair took place, which included Indian Business Learning Sessions along with a Procurement Fair where businesses networked with corporations, tribal enterprises, and government agencies in informal matchmaking sessions. The "Strategies for Success" learning session featured distinguished speakers from the NCAIED Board of Directors, Pechanga Tribe of Luiseno Indians, Seminole Tribe of Florida and a leading Native-American owned strategy firm. The "Federal Certifications" session featured experts in the realm of government contracting. Nick Manalisay, part of SBA's Office of Government Contracting, conducted a seminar on procurement.

Santa Ana District Office staff members served on the planning committee, moderated panel presentations, conducted seminars, organized displays and matchmaking for Native American-owned businesses and government agencies, defense contractors, port authorities and other purchasers of goods & services.

The SBA's involvement at INPRO followed the historic signing of a Memorandum of Understanding between the SBA and two organizations- the Pacific American Indian Development Center (PAID) and California Statewide Native American Business Enterprise Center (CANABEC).

SBA's Santa Ana District Office is committed to supporting the Native American small business community in its economic development efforts and looks forward to partnering more closely with all parties involved in 2009!

Insight & Inspiration - Business Plan Workshop

If you wanted to drive from New Hampshire to Texas, would you use a map? Of course you would! Well, the same goes for owning and running your own business.

A business plan is that 'map'. Take the time to make an appointment with one of our Resource Partners (links are at the top of this e-newsletter, left side) and use their expertise to help you create a business plan.

After, follow the plan! This is key; why take the time to create it if you don't follow it? Now, if you created one a while back, be sure to review it before following up, given the different economic times we currently find ourselves in.

Visit this link for an excellent online workshop to help you start and improve your business plan.
